

Convenience meets controlled access

Provide crash and incident reports online—without sacrificing the oversight your agency requires.

Inefficient crash and incident report processing can be costly and time-consuming for law enforcement agencies. It diverts attention from more pressing issues—like keeping the community safe—and can also be frustrating for citizens.

Many agencies want some type of automation in order to streamline their reporting processes, while still controlling what information they share and with whom. That's where LexisNexis® Request a Report can help.

Crash and incident report fulfillment that makes sense

LexisNexis Request a Report gives agencies a way to release crash and incident reports online while still controlling access to information. This helps to make it easier to fulfill report requests, including restricted reports—such as those involving fatalities and government vehicles.

Agencies win because the streamlined process helps to reduce the clerical effort required to fulfill reports. Citizens win because they can purchase crash reports and/or incident reports online—around the clock, without having to travel to the police department.

Benefits at a glance

With LexisNexis Request a Report, agencies can redact information, as necessary, before making reports available to authorized parties online.

Here's how it works:

An authorized party (i.e. party to the accident, insurance company or crime victim) completes the police report request from your agency's website

Agency reviews the request, redacts information as necessary, using the solution's built-in redaction tool, and uploads the report for delivery to the authorized party

Authorized party receives an email notification that their report is available and is provided a link to purchase the report

Authorized party purchases report and remits payment of associated agency fees

Authorized party can then download, print and save a copy of report

Completed request logged for the agency

Efficiency without missing any of the details

- Work more efficiently. Distribute reports online, 24/7, to authorized parties for better accessibility and efficiency.
- Improve customer service. Give citizens a fast, easy and convenient way to their authorized reports.
- Make reports more accessible. Users can access this web-based application from any computer connected to the Internet using a standard browser.
- Reduce back-office workload. Reallocate agency staff where they can make a real difference for the agency and to the community.
- Get detailed accounting and maximize value. Easily track and monitor report requests and sales, including who bought reports, date of purchase, fees generated and more. With streamlined processing, many agencies are able to direct agency fees to help with expenses other than records management.
- Enhance regulatory compliance. Better manage timelines for distributing reports to citizens in compliance with applicable law.
